Directed by Gina Osborn

Thank you to our sponsors for supporting this special event:
Higher education is the key to prosperity for so many of our citizens. We know that good jobs require college experience and that well-educated entrepreneurs help to infuse the economy with new jobs.

By 2019, two-thirds of all the job openings in Washington will require at least one year of college education. Many of the “middle-skill” occupations are supported by the education and training provided at community colleges.

Community colleges also play an important role in building the baccalaureate degree pipeline for many students who are interested in pursuing advanced degrees to further their education and careers.

In Washington, four out of ten public baccalaureate graduates started at a community or technical college. And, nearly a third of all engineering majors in four-year schools transferred from a community or technical college, most with either an Associate of Science Degree or a heavy concentration of STEM (science, technology, engineering and math) credits.

Lower Columbia College is committed to increasing the number of graduates from high-demand and STEM-related fields, which are vital to our economy and yet are among the most expensive programs to deliver. The Legislature’s investment in modern facilities, like the new LCC Health and Science Center, creates local jobs and supports the high-tech programs our students need and our local employers expect.

These are exciting times at Lower Columbia College as we celebrate the groundbreaking of the new Health and Science Center and anticipate building the future – a healthy future – for both our students and our local community.

We are deeply grateful to all of the individuals, families, and businesses who have supported Lower Columbia College’s students, programs and facilities over the years. And tonight, we pay special honor to our donors who have established scholarships to help deserving and promising students achieve their higher education goals.

Such generosity ensures that the LCC Foundation will successfully continue to support the college mission of student success and completion. Through the support and commitment of donors like you, we will ensure the key to prosperity will continue to open doors for our students and our community.
